Report on Sahadoran Aran

WASHINGTON (NYT) - A new Pentagon assessment of the Salvadoran Army asserts that it is so il-equipped to fight the Com-munist-ted insurgents there that it has "no hope" of defeating them. Against that background, Secretary of State Alexander M. Hais Ir. has told ambassadors of U.S allies that the administration's "most urgent objective" was to stop a large flow of arms from Communist nations to the guernilas in El Salvador.

The Pentagon assessment of El Salvador's army differed somewhat from a comment Saturday by Jose Napoleon Duarte, the country's president, who said the armed forces were canable of handling the guerrillas at present if the flow of arms to the insurgents stopped. What his country needs most, he said, is economic aid.

A memorandum on a briefing that took place last Wednesday quoted Mr. Haig as saying that the United States "will not remain passive" to what he described as a systematic, well-financed, sophisticated effort to impose a Communist regime in Central America."

U.S. Warns Allies On NATO Spending

Carlucci: Europe Should Pay 'Fair Share'

Frankes Dispaires

MUNICH - in what Pentagon officials called a significant hard-ening of the U.S. stance toward NATO allies, Frank Carlucci, the U.S. deputy secretary of defense, has warned that the United States cannot be expected to enhance its military effort in Europe or other areas uniess the allies contribute their "fair share" of the burden. Mr. Carlucci, speaking to an in-ternational meeting of Western military specialists Saturday, said Europe's economic output now ex-ceeds that of the United States. He ilso accused the Soviet Union of developing its military forces be-youd defense needs and elaimed that it is building an offensive potential directed at Mideast oilfields

The Soviet buildup in Europe clearly exceeds any rational re-quirement for defense," Mr. Car-lucci said. "It bears all the marks of an offensive military capability. consistent with Soviet military doctrine.

"This steady and cumulative ex-pansion of conventional, chemical and theater nuclear forces has been accompanied by a long-term and major shift in the strategic nu-clear balance, from one of unquestioned U.S. superiority to essential equivalence, and the prospect, if appropriate steps are not taken, of possible inferiority. The twin re-sults of this shift are that the United States no longer enjoys a strate-gic edge to compensate for other deficiencies and that Soviet ability to use the threat of conventional force for political purposes could be confiferently enhanced. On all force for political purposes could be significantly enhanced. On all levels of military capability, the trends are ominous

Beyond Europe

To promote a "mature alliance," Mr. Carlucci called on the allies to embrace an "expanded concept of European security that would have them build up their military and political ramparts well beyond Europe, particularly in the strate-gic Gulf area.

Mr. Carlucci's remarks came at the 18th annual Wehrkunde Conference, organized by a private West German group that seeks to promote public awareness of military policies.

In recent years, Washington has heen pressuring the NATO allies to play a greater role in Western military preparedness. But Saturday's speech appeared to be the most pointed public statement yet, and clearly designed in compel the allies to match the military build-up President Reagan is asking of Congress in his budget.

It is the firm political resolve of the German federal government to reach this goal not through the expansion of mittary arsenals, but hy way of mutual and balanced force limitations and, wherever possible, a reduction of military fonce levels."

The new Pentagon assessment, completed last week from firsthand reports from Central America, asserted that the guerrillas would most likely become stronger by Aoril, when fresh shipments of arms are scheduled for completion. Officials in Washington said the supplies — from Vietnam, Ethiopia, Bulgaria, Hungary and East Germany — were shipped by sea through Cuba, flowing into Ni-caragua and Honduras en route to El Salvador. Most of the weapons, ammunition, communications equipment and medical supplies were bought or captured from Western nations, the officials said.

U.S. Study Calls Aid To Junta a 'Mistake'

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. support for El Salvador's junta is "a diplomatic mistake and a misreading of Salvadoran history" that could contribute to defeat of the democratic cause there, according to a report prepared for the State Department.

The 132-page document does not mention Soviet or Cuban involvement in El Salvador, Rather, it traces the roots of the civil conflict to more than a century of economic inequality and generations of repressive rule.

The draft version of the study. written two months ago by three University of North Carolina professors under contract in the State Department, was nhiained by The Associated Press.

In an interview, one of the authors, Enrique A. Baloyra, agreed that leftist nations had supplied arms to the guerrillas, but he said claims of strong Cuban influence over the insurgency were "counter to the facts." The report was crinicized by some government officials, whn there were disagreements over the report's view of external involvement and of what constitutes a le-gitimate democracy.

AFL-CIO Chiefs Cast About for Answers As Influence Slips With Rank-and-File

By Philip Shabecoff New York Times Service

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. - When President Reagan suggested last week that labor leaders were "out of step" with their own rank and file in last year's election and io their opposition to his administration's economic program, unioo chiefs gathered here indignantly rejected the notion.

Lane Kirkland, the president of the AFL-CIO, firmly responded that the trade union movement was more democratic than the Reagan administration had so far demonstrated itself to be in creating its economic policy.

The union leaders at the federation's executive council meeting here have indeed been engaged in some intense soul-searching about the decline of their political for-tunes and influence. But so far they have been finding that the fault lies in their stars, in former President Jimmy Carter, in the Democratic Party — anyplace, io fact, but in themselves.

The one answer that the union presidents and the labor federation's staff have come up with to regain their political power is that

William W. Winpisinger, president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, one of the few unions not to endorse Mr. Carter last year, said that "to the extent that our people voted for Reagan, it was an anti-Carter vote."

Albert Shanker, the president of the American Federation of Teachers, said that while his union voted by a 2 to 1 ratio for Mr. Carter, it did so because of the single issue of tuition tax credits, which Mr. Reagan had endorsed and the union had rejected. Several union leaders said that their members were supporting Mr. Reagan's economic and social policies only because they do not realize their consequences.

However, the union leaders do oot appear to connect these oreds with their declining political ioflu-ence. Instead, the union leaders are greatly concerned about the "image" of the trade union movement. And yet, if the unions did substantially improve communica-tions with their own members and at the same time restored the momentum of trade union growth through organizing, enhanced po-litical influence could almost certainly be the natural consequence.

BOSTON -- A cheap, simple blood lest can accurately predict the risk of heart attack among middle-aged men who smoke cigarettes, according to the conclusions of a French

The report, called the Paris Prospective Study, says men's chances of heart attacks increase with the oumber of white cells to their blood.

The French researchers reached their conclusions after following the health of 7,206 Paris city workers for an average of 61/2 years. The study was directed by Julia B. Zalokar of the National Institute of Health and Medical Research in Villejuif, France, and published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Japan Faces Decade With Quiet Confidence

By Henry Scott Stokes New York Times Service

TOKYO - Japan is facing the 1980s in a mood of self-confidence that is different from the sometimes cocky and ahrasive attitude that resulted from the spectacular growth of its economy in the precediog decades.

The new attitude is reflected in views about foreign policy and de-fense. In the early 1970s the yen emerged as a strong currency and there was talk among right-wingers in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party of acquiring nuclear weapoos and building up large conven-tional forces. But the oil crisis of 1973 coupled with runaway infla-tion undermined optimism here. creating a panic among consumers and halting talk of Japan's new

British Officials Protest Verbal Attacks By Members of Singapore Government

The British are tired of hearing their system being cited in Singa-pore as a recipe for failure, and their country being compared un-favorably with Japan and West

British diplomats are dismayed that government leaders from Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew on down see fit to use almost any public occasion to make disparagproblems as an example of an undisciplined, self-destructive and class-ridden society.

Diplomatic sources said that the protest was contained in a letter to the People's Action Party after a scathing attack by a trade union leader during last December's general election campaign.

Incongruent Views

The contents of the letter were not disclosed, but the sources said that it reflected deep concern over the harmful long-term effect of what they saw as a never-ending denigration of Britain by Singaporean leaders.

Singaporean officials insist, however, that relations with Britain have never been better. They say that the criticisms do not show a serious rupture in traditional and historical ties with Britain, which established the island as a trading nese.

But the British, after years of silence, felt that it was time to make their first high-level representation following an election rally speech in December by the president of the government-backed National Trades Union Congress, Devan

Unlikely Event

The only chance for Britain to become great again would be if people like Lee Kuan Yew, [First Deputy Prime Minister] Goh Keng Swee and [Second Deputy Prime Minister] Sinnathamhy Rajaratnam were to reincarnate in Britain in their next lives," Mr. Nair declared.

Other leading members of the ruling party and junior ministers also have been urging Singa-poreans to discard the British example and model their highly industrialized society on Japan and West Germany.

But what disturbed the British diplomats most was that Mr. Lee. a Cambridge-educated lawyer, was also a frequent critic of the British system while showering praise on the West Germans and the Japa-

The caution in Japan may be frustrating to the Reagan adminis-tration, which may prefer visible military support from the main U.S. ally in the Far East. Japanese policy makers, ootably at the Foreign Ministry, have therefore strived since the mid-1970s to find a rationale for supporting U.S. global aims by means other than

The rationale - the comprehensive security policy — seems to be widely accepted in Japanese politics and the bureaucracy. Japan will give emergency economic aid. embauled nations — with the ex-ception of Israel. Aid will be donbled in the first half of the 1980s to well over $20 billion.

The premise of this policy is that Japan will prosper only in a world at peace. Protection of oil and food-supply soutes cannot be as-sured by building an armada of ships or by introducing nuclear weapons, Liberal Democrat officials say.

Japan has generally been silent on foreign-policy issues since the end of World War II. "The truth is, we have no foreign policy," a leading diplomat said in an inter-view in early 1979.

But Japan has recently ex-pressed definite views on foreign-policy issues. Cambodia is an example. Last mooth the chief Cabioet secretary, Kiichi Miyazawa, Mr. Suzuki's right-hand man, warned that continued support for Pol Pot as leader of Cambodia was mistaken.

The Japanese have been cautious in their support of the Chun Doo Hwan regime in South Korea. and Mr. Suzuki will not attend Mr. Chun's inauguration in Seoul as president in March, officials said. The Japanese policy may disap-point the United States, which has enthusiastically supported Mr. Chun. But at other times the Japaoese have strongly supported U.S. aims, such as in Indochina when Japan cut off ecocomic aid in early 1979 to Vietnam after the Vietoamese invaded Cambodia.

For Japan the alliance with the United States is the cornerstone of foreign policy, and relations between the two powers were never better, officials on both sides say.

But behind this stance is the fact that Japan is increasingly independent and quietly conscious of its weight in affairs, as was shown when Mr. Suzuki became the first premier since the end of World War II not to make his first overseas trip a visit to Washington.

Of Bananas, Eagles and a 2-Mayor City: Under the Bravado, Davao Has Problems

By Henry Kamm

New York Times Service DAVAO, Philippines - This large, raw settler city, which likes to compare itself to towns of the early American West, exemplifies the essence of political life in the Philippines, often covering deadly serious problems with an overlay of bravado and comie opera.

With a population officially listed at 611.000 but estimated at closer to 1 million, Davao, in the central part of the southern island of Mindanao, is the second- or thirdlargest city in the country, depending on how the population of Cebu is counted. Although it has an area of 1,100 square miles, it is hardly a city at all.

There is a lot of jungle within the city limits. Mayor Luis T. Santos said. There are also a lot of monkey-eating eagles; indeed, the city is the sole habitat of the large birds of prey. Within the city limits there are also extensive banana, pineapple and coconut plantations and rural as well as urban squatters.

Mayor Santos has been labeled "the squatter of City Hall." In January, 1980, he was defeated for reelection although be was the candidate of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' New Society Party, which tends to win at the polls.

Solomonic Compromise

The candidate of the opposition Nacionalista Party, Elias Lopez, received 2,000 more votes hut has not been proclaimed the winner. Moves before the Election Commission and the courts have perpe-mated the deadlock, and Mr. San-tos, backed by the influence of the national government, insists that be is legally in office until the con-test is decided.

Friday, wheo Pope John Paul II visited Davao, the official city newspaper, which was distributed among the pope's entourage and featured portraits of the pope and Mr. Santos on its front page, had been sabotaged. Under the may-or's picture was the typed-in caption, "an impostor." Mr. Lopez, however, is also close to the president's party, and Mr. Marcos' local friends, with the president's cooperation, are working out a Solomonic compromise, resolving in one maneuver the elec-tion deadlock and the problem of Davao's unwieldy dimensions. Mr. Santos disclosed, and Mr.

Marcos kingmaker in Mindanao, Antonio O. Floirendo, confirmed, that a plan was afoot to split Davao into two cities, providing em-ployment for both men with a claim to the mayoralty.

Imelda City

"Davao will be divided within the year," Mayor Santos said: Mr. Floirendo said the issue would be put to a plebiscite.

One part of the divided city will, predictably, be named New Davao. As for the other, Mr. Santos disclosed that Mr. Marcos was considering allowing it to be named for his wife. Imelda, who is minister of human settlements and governor of Manila Mr. Floirendo. who is close to Mrs. Marcos, said she asked him to discourage such a move but indicated that she was ready to let it happen if it could not be stopped.

"I'd love to have it Imelda City." Mayor Santos said. "It would make it much easier to get funds from Manila."

make inroads, feeding on discontent over worsening economic conditions for urban and rural workers, dispossession of rural squatters from lands taken over by large, often foreign-financed plantations and military excesses during the more than eight years of

Vietnamese Priests Report Pressure Against Catholics

By Keyes Beech

Los Angeles Times Service LAEM SING, Thailand — Apparently wary over the powerful role that the Roman Catholic Church has played in the recent unrest in Poland. Vietnamese Communists have tightened sanctions on the church in southern Vietnam, according to two Cathobe priests who recently arrived at the refugee camp here.

The two priests, one of whom asked to remain anonymous for fear of reprisals against his family, said that Communist officials ac-knowledged that a renewed cam-paign against the church is linked to events in Poland.

About 100 of the approximately 500 refugees in this camp on the Gulf of Thailand are Catholics.
The priests said the Communists look upon the church as a poten-tially "destabilizing" element. But there was no indication that the regime regards the church as an immediate challenge to its power. Although a minority. Vietnamese Catholics exercised influence out of all proportion to their numbers before the Communist takeover of the South in 1975. This was especially true during the regime of President Ngo Dinh Diem, a Catholic, who was murdered in 1963. Of the 800,000 people who fled from North to South Vietnam when the country was partitioned in 1954, about 600,000 were Cath-olics. Under Mr. Diem's regimes, they were given preferential treatment in resettling in the South. In 1975, an estimated 10 percent of Vietnamese were Catholics

Imericans, Jailed 8 Years for Drugs, Leave Turkey

AARA — Four American prisoners, calm i learly pleased, took off Sunday for the Unitates under a recently ratified prisoners extensive treaty, after spending more than eight in Turkish jails on hashish smuggling Americans, Jo Ann McDaniel, 35, of Sa-tre, Katherine Zenz, 34, of Lancaster, Wis, st Hubbard, 29, of Fort Riley, Kan., and Mi-Ray, 35, of Little Rock, Ark., declinmake any statements to the press. Miss a Prison, near the Aegean city of Izmir.

Americans, who were serving 24-year prison ces under Turkish law, will be given a hear-fore a U.S. parole board. A representative U.S. Justice Department, a U.S. public defender and three federal marshals accompanied them on the journey to New York via Frankfurt. Mr. Ray was believed to bave been the model for a character in the film "Midnight Express," which alleged that Western prisoners accused of drug smuggling were physically and sexually abused in Turkish prisons. Columnist Jack Anderson contended in 1978 that Mr. Ray was the model for the character who was beaten for trying to dig an escape tunnel out of prison with Billy Hayes, the central character who escaped several years ago.

According to Turkish prison officials, the Americans have been "model prisoners."

It was unclear whether Mr. Ray was charged in a case involving the other three, who were arrested Dec. 14, 1972, on the border with Syria and charged with trying to smuggle 650 pounds of hashish into Turkey.

The French reporter said the area from the border to Kandahar was completely under the control of Moslem insurgents, adding, "If you stay off the main road, there is no presence of Russian or Afghan, troops."

They drove into the city's main bazaar area unchallenged and then put up at the front's suburban headquarters. Mr. Olivier said. On Wednesday, their first night in Kandahar, they observed an un-successful raid on a technical school building used by armed members of the Afghan ruling par-

The Paris-based reporter, who has made three trips to insurgent-held areas of Afghanistan in the past year, said the heavy Soviet push began Thursday and continued at least through Friday when front officials instructed his team to head back to Pakistan.

Outside of town, the Frenchmen were told that the guerrilla organization's headquarters was hit by two shells a balf hour after they left, killing-Mr. Ramazan and two of his men, Mr. Olivier said.

U.S. law in principle requires that any sale of a U.S.-made aircraft — even in a foreign country by a foreign owner — be approved just as the original export was. When U.S. officials tried to track down the company involved, they found it was a storefront in Miami regis-tered in Delaware at a "maildrop" address with a number of other

So far, there has been no official determination whether U.S. law was formally violated in the case, in part because of a lack of re-sources to investigate thoroughly what the company actually was, who formed it and what it did. In addition, some countries view the U.S. re-export restrictions as an infringement on their own sovereignty and refuse to help enforce them. Because Col. Qadhali's air force already has more than adequate airlift ability, including recent So-vict-made Ilyushin 76s and Italian-made G-222s, U.S. officials are not worried by the acquisition of the U.S. aircraft. At the same time, they are irritated because Libva has managed to flout U.S. export law while Washington is making a principle of withholding delivery of the C-130s already purchased

Soviet Ships Sent To Maputo After S. African Raid

et Union is sending military ships to Mozambique in what is seen as a warning to South Africa not to repeat last month's commando raid inside the borders of its Marxist-ruled neighbor. The 16,000-ton cruiser Alexandr Suvorov and another Soviet ship from the Indian Ocean fleet docked last week in the ports of Beira and Maputo, and Valentin Vdovin, the Soviet ambassador to Mozambique, said at a oews conference Saturday in Maputo that other Soviet military ships would arrive in Mozambique's waters "in the next few days." He did not say how many ships would dock or how long they would remain.

"We are not threatening anyone," he was quoted as saying by the official Mozambique news agency, "but if anyone attacks us or our friends, we will give a suitable response."

On Jan. 30, South African com-mandos raided three houses in a Maputo suburb, 50 kilometers (31 miles) from the South African border, which they contended houses were headquarters of the African National Congress, a banned black nationalist group fighting the South Africa.

He be-lieves that the Russians, stung by Mr. Reagan's initial verbal attacks, have pulled back and are considering bow to shape their own code of conduct toward Mr. Reagan, rather than thinking about ways to seek a new international code of

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing is apparently hopeful, however, that continued Soviet nonintervention in Poland and some movement on Afghanistan and other problems could create the atmosphere late this year for the convening of an East-West summit conference including not only Mr. Reagan and Mr. Brezhnev, but also the leaders of the world's other major powers - to discuss global ac-

For the moment, the French president, facing a surprisingly spirited re-election surgicle in which foreign policy will play an important role, is saying nothing publicly about these impressions and his ideas on breaking the im-passe that detente has reached. He retreated into diplomatic sileace when the subjects were broached for comment during a conversation in his Elysee Palace office Friday.

Response From Breziner

He did confirm that after receiving a response from Mr. Brezhnev, he is pushing forward with the pro-posal he made last month for an mternational conference on Afghanistan that conceivably could bring the United States and the Soviet Union together at a bargaining table.

Mr. Brezhoev's previously undisclosed Feb. 4 letter contained a reaffirmation of traditional Soviet positions oo Afghanistan and other subjects, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said, but did not constitute "a formal negative response." Instead, "it cited a number of problems such a proposal raises." ing short of a rejection, he said.
The French leader said positive responses had come from the Islamic Conference Organization, from his European partners, and from Pakistan, which had reacted with initial irritation when Mr. Giscard d'Estaing made the proposel on French television Jan. 27.

The Reagan administration has endorsed the plan, which Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said on television should bring together the Soviet Union, those countries that are accused by the Russians of actively supporting the Afghan rebels, and the permanent members of the United Nations Security Council. On Friday, however, President Babrak Karmal of Afghanistan rejected the Giscard proposal, deoouncing "any attempt to interna-tionalize the Afghan question." The Soviet Union, which has put 85,000 troops into Alghanistan, supports direct bilateral talks between the Karmal government and Afghanistan's neighbors, an idea rejected by Pakistan.

Broader Preoccupation Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's proposal on Afghanistan appears to be part of a much broader preoccupation be has with the troubled state of East-West relations and the outlook he has for the coming months, It is an outlook marked by the fact that when he speaks of the period of detente, he uses the For him, the most reassuring Associates say Mr. Giscard d'Estaing is impressed that Mr. Reagan is "taking his time," in contrast to Jimmy Carter's initial burst of policy proposed. burst of policy proposals. Mr. Gis-card d'Estaing is known to feel that the welter of Carter proposals led to four years of vacillation and confusion in U.S. foreign policy.

The French president, who regu-larly receives long letters from Mr. Brezhnev, senses that the Soviet leadership was in some ways relieved to see an end to four erratic years under Mr. Carter and was ready to define a new relationship

Libya: The Outlaw State

lt's irritating to find that Libva has sneaked around the U.S. embargo and bought a transport plane. But that's the least of Col. Moamer Qadhafi's offenses. In 11 years of power he has harnessed Libva's oil billions to his peculiar Islamic precepts and fomented coups, revolutions, separatist movements and terrorism in dozens of countries around the world.

His latest move is to invade neighboring Chad, whose uranium-rich northern tier he annexed five years ago. Thus has he carried off the first victory of his Soviet-supplied arms and put himself in a position to extend his troublemaking in Africa.

Ideally. France, still the leading outside patron of formerly French West Africa. would have challenged Lihya's "Islamic le-gions" in Chad. But France had harkened to an African call to permit an "African solution" to Chad's long, ragged civil war, and had withdrawn its troops last year. The legal government then invited Col. Qadhafi in.

There was also the matter of a new contract signed with Libya by the French state oil company. Since then, the French have condemned Libya, bolstered their forces in the region and suspended the new contract. African states have demanded Libya's withdrawal from Chad. But Libya's menace remains real.

The scope of Col. Qadhaft's outlawry is matched only by the scope of other nations' tolerance of it. More than the weight of oil and Soviet patronage is involved. Col.

Qadhafi has cleverly exploited his place in Arah, Islamic, "anti-imperialist" and anti-Zionist ranks. So bold and unlikely is his policy - like Hitler's - that people have trouble grasping the whole and the purpose of it.

The immediate issue is Chad. The predommantly black and Christian population in the South is not under Libya's thumb and deserves to be sustained by traditional friends in the region, while a close eye is kept on the more fluid politics of the Libyan-controlled Moslem North. African efforts to sponsor elections offering citizens of Chad the choice of living under Lihya or not should he encouraged.

In the Carter years the impression spread — certainly it did in Egypt, a bitter rival of Col. Qadhafi's — that for all of its depredations Lihva enjoyed a certain official indulgence in the United States. The Reagan administration, determined to be tougher on international terrorism and on states that act as Soviet pawns, appears ready to remove that impression.

But what judgment must Col. Qadhafi make about U.S. seriousness as he notes that through the 1970s, while virtually all the U.S. allies reduced and in some cases (France) terminated their imports of Libyan oil, the United States tripled its imports? The largest single part, about a third, of the $20-hillionplus that Col. Qadhafi acquired last year to finance his dreams of fslamic glory, and his acts of aggression and terror, came from the United States.

The Gulf in the Gulf Command

The most vital step in any military operation is to appoint a commander to run it. But in preparing to defend Gulf oil, the Carter administration did this old adage four hetter: it gave control of the new Rapid Deployment Force to five different military authorities. The force's command structure has been described by one of its highest officers as "a nightmare." And that's in peacetime.

It is hardly surprising that the four U.S. armed services competed for control of a large integrated force whose readiness is being given even higher priority than that of the comhat units of NATO. But that does not excuse a deadlock that has stalled orderly command arrangements since August.

That is when it was decided to change the focus of the force from preparing for limited action anywhere to the defense of Southwest Asia against a heavy Soviet attack. Accordingly, the force and its Marine commander, Lt. Gen. P.X. Kelley, should have been removed from peacetime control by the Armydirected Readiness Command in the United States and assigned to the people who will control it in wartime. The available choices have been an independent theater command directly under the Joint Chiefs, or a subheadquarters of either the European Command in Stuttgart or the Pacific Command in

A new theater may ultimately be useful for a command that may one day field a force of seven or eight divisions. One Marine division and four Army divisions are already designated for it. But there is now no suitable place in the Middle East to base a theater headquarters, much less its divisions. And all the chiefs agree on using existing command structures instead of duplicating them.

A staff study for the chiefs has proposed a sensible solution: vesting control of the Rapid Deployment Force in the European Command, with only its naval support and one Marine division controlled from Hawaii. This has now heen accepted by Gen. Kelley and the chiefs, except for the Marine Corps commandant, who counts on the support of

The logic of the proposal is inescapable. The European Command is headed by Gen. Bernard Rogers, NATO's supreme commander. The defense of Europe's oil would thus be put in the same hands as the defense of Europe. Moreover, the Rapid Deployment Force needs NATO ports and airfields to reach the Gulf. And because it would divert supplies and troops from the European theater, its creation should go hand in hand with efforts to persuade Europeans to fill the gap and to contribute to the Gulf effort.

All major considerations point in a single direction: a European command for what will really be a Middle East force. The Pentagon should get on with it.

Example and Warning

The strong wind of liberal conviction blows through the economic program of the new American president. Mr. Reagan and his team trust in the strength of a free economy, the dynamic of entrepreneurial initiative. Not state programs conceived hy bureaucrats hut entrepreneurial initiative is supposed to lend the American economy the stature that corresponds to the country's political power.

The president will be successful with his initially unpopular measures only if he wins the trust of hroad sections of the public. Especially his hudget policy is bold and hy no means assured of success. This program makes the attempt to refloat hy means of a liberal policy an economy already sloshing through boggy terrain.

It is under this aspect that other countries, in particular the Federal Republic, will look at America. There, the impression is growing that the remarkable strengthening of the dollar already reflects the trust that other countries, too, put in the new administration. So, just as the British prime minister applies liberal policy to save her country, now America takes after her. For the Federal Republic and for Europe, these are not only Platonic examples. Economic powers are perhaps growing here that give notice of a new status in international competition. Mr. Reagan's policy is consequently an example and also a warning to those here at home who want to go up against economic calamities always with the same prescriptions based on government ac-

Unpleasant Imitative Effects

Within the United States, the expenditure cuts include hlatant reductions in help for the poor, which run counter to the ethic of the Great Society that American governments strove toward in past years. This in itself, from the world's leading democracy, is likely to have unpleasant imitative effects elsewhere in the world ...

Implications for the developing countries are even more disturbing. Mr. Reagan's hudget director, David Stockman, has found easy targets for cuts in aid programs, and there are disturbing plans for running down American commitments to such multilateral agencies as the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. Such institutions are an important source of stability and assistance in a shaky world economic order. - From The Observer (London).

Dash for Growth

Some of the details of the Reagan-Stockman package have heen shrewdly and imaginatively conceived ... The fact remains, however, that this is a very high-risk strategy, with few solid guarantees even if Congress lets it through intact. It is a dash-for-growth plan, launched while prices are still rising at 12 percent a year.

WASHINGTON — It dawned on me not long after President Reagan's resounding victory over Jimmy Carter that I should have expected it and everyone else should have, too.

Two things were so obvious and so overwhelmingly important that nothing else should bave mattered. These simple facts were operating in Mr. Reagan's favor; Large numbers of Americans had less real disposable income in 1980 than they had in 1976 and most Americans believed the United States had grown relatively weaker during the same peri-

Almost everybody I spoke to in Washington agreed that they should have known and that in broad terms, those were the reasons. Now, the pollster Daniel Yankelovich and one of his associates, Larry Kangan, have collected a great deal of evidence to support the basic the-

on Foreign Relations, they analyze President Reagan's foreign policy mandate as expressed in numerous opinion polls.

"In the public eye," they write, "American travails in the world arena are part of a pervasive concern about what might be labeled loss ol control ... Of the many forms of loss of control, come has more serious foreign policy implications than the concern that the nation has grown weaker ..."

Series of Erents

The article covers a series of events beginning with the bostage-taking and the Soviet in-vasion of Afghanistan, both at the end of 1979, through the reversed UN vote on Israeli settlements on the West Bank, Fidel Castro's unleashing of Cuban refugees, the failed rescue attempt in Iran and related resignation of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

It was clear without the evidence of public opinion surveys that each of these events would cost Mr. Carter votes, whether he was responsible for them or not. Retrospectively, the polls tell as just how badly they hurt him.
As 1980 began, polls indicated that 42 percent of Americans considered foreign policy

"the most important problem facing the country today." Seven months earlier, before the hostages were taken and before the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the figure was a minuscule 3 percent. At the same time, "Americans who feel that the country is in deep and se-rious trouble' reached an unprecedented 84 percent in 1980."

Mr. Yankelovich and Mr. Kaagan weave concern about economic problems into their article, but the focus is on the public's perception of national security and the U.S. role in the world. They contend that the angry public response to Afghanistan in particular, is the result of "a coalescence of anxienes" and that it would be a mistake to conclude that a few months of quiet will dissipate it.

They argue that the electorate has given Mr. Reagan a clear mandate to be tough, to use U.S. force to aid allies and to restore U.S. honor in the world. But they also point out that the United States is less well equipped to carry out that mandate than it was in the early 1960s.

They conclude by warning that if Mr. Reagan's policies should fail to bring things under cootrol, the result is less likely to be a return to the liberalism of the last 50 years.

than a swing "toward the strongly ideological right, with its villains, scapegoats and calls for righteous authoritariani Unfortunately, there is less hard evidence for that thesis than for the spillover of frustration that contributed so heavily to Mr. Reagan's triumph in November.

Polls are weakest at prediction, especially in a volatile situation, because they are only the measure of opinion at a given moment. So when they suggest what U.S. voters will do next time. Mr. Yankelovieh and Mr. Kaagan are venturing into conjecture They recognize that it will be difficult for the president to shape a consensus behind subtle, ouanced policies — it always is — and that the United States is "no longer the world's pre-eminent locus of military and economic pow-er." They also give the U.S. public credit for being more consistent in its foreign policy views than policymakers. But they evidently do not believe that in their stored-up frustration and anger U.S. voters will grasp the occasional need to try achiev-ing by diplomacy what cannot be accom-plished by force.

They could be right. But they seem to have reached their conclusion on the basis of a slowly building feeling that U.S. pride has been wounded and that Americans find that intolerable. Another possible conclusion is that, always pragmatic, Americans are simply looking for something that will work. I don't mean to suggest that the electorate is likely to shift from its current hawkishness to a posture of appeasement. But in 1984 a centrist Democrat like John Glenn could prove a lot more attractive than a conservative Republi-can like Jesse Helms. That, of course, is also

Brezhnev's Gratitude and the Soviet Fate

By Leopold Unger

Brezhnev said during ceremonies marking his 74th birthday last De-cember. It was an indication of his very good sense.

When Mr. Brezhnev came to power in 1964, Mao ruled in Pe-king and Lyndon Johnson was U.S. president. They are both dead and their successors have already been replaced. And still, Mr. Brezhnev, the oldest leader of the Soviet state ever, has no intention of abandoning his post.

Just a year ago, he appeared on the edge of collapse, completely worn down by an undisclosed illness. He has since fully recovered and strengthened his bold on the reigns of power that seemed to be slipping away from him at the

Monday, Mr. Brezhnev is to open the 26th Soviet Communist Party congress for the fourth time as leader of the Soviet Union and he has every reason to be grateful for his fate. Yet, the 265 million Soviet citizens should also be asked if they have any reason to be grateful for their fate. The 6,000 delegates to the party congress will unquestionably manifest their enthusiastic and unanimous approval of the circumstances that have put and kept Mr. Brezhnev on top in the Kremlin.

The Brezhnev system dislikes surprise and the congress will be in the image of its leader. There will be no terror and no preliminary extermination of rivals as just before the 18th congress under Stalin. no extraordinary and brutal declarations such as Nikita Khrushchev's "secret report" during the 20th congress in 1956 and no utopic slogans like the one launched during the 22d congress of 1961 about catching up with and passing the capitalist system by 1970.

Yet, behind the pompous front of monolithic unity and the declarations of unanimous approbation, there will be the specter of the most disappointing balance sheet ever presented by a Soviet leader and of the most dangerous risks undertaken hy the Soviet Union in For the first time since World War II, Moscow now can legitl-mately complain about encirclement. But the encirclement is the work of Communists, not capitalists. It is the result of the contradictions of the Soviet system and not the object of an imperialist

In the East, China, the biggest Communist state, openly declares that there is nothing Socialist in the Soviet empire. In the South, the Afghanistan adventure has made very clear the real goals of BRUSSELS —"I am very grate-the Communist superpower. In the ful for my fate," Leonid I. West, Poland has already negated the fundamental dogma that the Soviet system elaborated with great difficulty 64 years ago. The Soviet Union has never been so isolated in postwar times as now. The invasion of Afghanistan, a nonaligned country, has severely shaken its position in the Third World, while the Soviet threat of force against Poland has led to a crisis in Moscow's relations with the West and 10 confusion within the East Bloc.

The election of President Reagan and his show of determination to react to Communist moves on any coolineat were of on belp to Mr. Brezhnev. In other words, the Soviet leader's main international objectives, to create a detente that would be beneficial to the Soviet Union and to sign the SALT-2 accords, are now things of the past.

Further proof of this new situa-tion is Washington's indication that it will continue the grain em-bargo, showing that linkage is now operadonal in U.S.-Soviet rela-

The grain embargo is an important factor in Soviet economic stagnation and Mr. Brezhnev will have to tell the party congress about the failure of the Soviet economy. Most of the main goals of the last five-year plan, 1976-1980, have oot been met. The lith plan, to be launched at the congress, will have the least ambitious goals of any since the war. Yet even these goals can be considered illusory. Scarcity is now endemic in the Soviet Union. The world's second greatest economie power and biggest producer of energy has shown itself unable to offer its people a decent standard of living.

Soviet experts have warned that the regime today is threatened more by a state of lethargy, by the stagnation and apathy of its population, than by its real internal enemies or those throughout the world. The real Soviet problem is not one of a good system inefficiently applied by incompetent bureaucrats, but the system itself. No repression, oo censorship can erase the evidence of three basic fact agement is an overall failure and the Soviet model is in no way an attractive one. After 35 years of violent agitation, Poland has rejected it completely. And for the first time in 60 years, the heads of the three biggest Communist parties in the West have decided not to attend the congress of Lenin's party. The secood evident fact is that ideology no longer exists. The first Communist state has no grand ideal to offer. The latest armed conflicts opposed not Communist and capitalist states, but the Soviet Un-ion and Afghanistan, China and Vietnam and Cambodia. Long gone is the concept that Communists states never would make war against each other.

First, the Soviet system of man-

The only remaining vehicle for the Soviet ideal is Moscow's military power - the third basic fact. Arms are the only field in which "real Communism" is capable of keeping its promises or of backing up its threats. It is Moscow's only calling card, the only explanation for its role on the international

More eclectic economists generally are

this group. "Inflation stands a good chance of significant improvement," he said. "In-stant oil decontrol has front-loaded the inflating process of the president's term, and the enormity of the 1979-80 OPEC increase gives President Reagan a good chance of avoiding the third round of OPEC trouble during his first term.

"While a limited wage acceleration still lies ahead with only small productivity niffsets, and industrial prices are likely to stage a round of catch-up increases, the dollar will be aided by high interest rates, monetary restraint and conservative policies," he said. "As a result, there is a pretty good prospect for a reduction of the infla-tion rate from the inherited 12 percent to single-digit figures."

But Mr. Eckstein's best guess for consumer price inflation in 1982 and 1983 is 9.6 percent, only narrowly below double digits.

The Reagan administration, in a compromise between some of its supply-side economists and those using more conventional analytical techniques, projected that inflation—as measured by the gross national product deflator—would drop from 9.8 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 9.5 per cent in 1982. Because of an assumed drop in interest rates, including home mortgage rates, the decline in consumer price inflation would be even greater. The consumer price index, up 12.4 percent last year, is forecast to go up 10.5 percent in 1981 and 7.2 percent in 1982.

However, various administration spokesmen last week stressed in appearances on Capitol Hill that they regarded their estimates as conservanve.

Some monetarist economists, such as Robert Weintranb of the congressional Joint Economic Committee, agree. They think the anti-inflation payoff from slower money growth will be much more dramatic than the administration prodicts. lministration predicts.

On the 11ther hand, Alan Greenspan, for-ter chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, who has had a significant role in developing the administration's economic plan, is not quite so optimistic about 1982 as the Reagan economists. Last week he pre-dicted that the GNP deflator would rise 9.3 percent this year and 8.3 percent in 1982.

Mr. Greenspan believes inflationary ex-pectations will indeed fall as Congress ap-proves many of Mr. Reagan's proposals and the Fed slows money growth. But much of the improvement in inflation in 1982, in his view, will be the result of the combination of

A solution might be found in the NGKOK - A United Nations economic ev released Sunday said the outlook for with in exports from the developing countries sia and the Pacific in 1981 was gloomy.

The survey also predicted that high prices of food grains would prevail because of an expected shortage in world production. Therefore, developing countries, most of which were dependent on food imports, would have to face higher costs.

The report said inflation hit many developing countries during 1979-80 because of the sharp rise in oil prices and expansionary monetary and fiscal policies. New York Times Service New York Times Service
NEW YORK — Last week's secret meeting of six OPEC oil ministers in Geneva has resulted in a move toward cutting back oil production to keep prices up in the face of growing supplies and weak demand, oil industry sources said.

As a result of the meeting, which began Thursday and lasted a day and a half, Saudi Arabia indicated that it intended to cut production that it intended to cut production by 2 million barrels a day, to about 8.3 million, according to Harry Neustein, a crude oil trader who said he had talked by telephone with OPEC officials Friday.

in return, analysts suggest, the kingdom may press for a unified pricing pattern. Its reported agreement to increase prices $2 a bar-rel, to $34, is also seen as a step m this direction. For several years, Saudi Arabia has kept its prices consistently below those charged by other OPEC nations. Current official base prices, including a variety of differentials based oo quality and transport costs, range from $32 to $41 a barrel. A sagging world oil market is also responsible for any cutbacks that might be decided upon. For example, the price of Arabian light crude, Saudi Arabia's standard variety, has fallen to about $36.50 on the spot market from $40 last Sep-tember. Some OPEC producers are concerned that continuing current production levels, particularly in the face of increasing supplies from Iran and Iraq and a recessioo-induced decline in demand, will erode prices.

Foot Leads 30,000 In Protest in Glasgow

GLASGOW — British opposi-tion leader Michael Foot led an es-timated 30,000 people in a rally Sunday to protest Britain's rising unemployment rate.

Mr. Foot, the Labor Party leader, said that the latest unemployment figures, due out on Tuesday, would be even higher than last month's total of 2.4 million, 10 percent of the work force.

New York Times Service Banque Française du Commerce WASHINGTON - The El Paso Exterieur is next to tap the Eu-Co, has decided to write off an inrofranc sector with an issue expectvestment of up to $375 million in ed to total around 400 million gas-processing equipment because of the collapse of negotiations be-tween the United States and Algerfranes. However, a good part of this is being pre-placed. In Tokyo, Furukawa Electric Co. said it will shortly launch a ia on the price of liquefied natural gas to be imported by El Paso, fur-ther darkening prospects for U.S. imports of liquetied gas. £15 million, 15-year convertible Eurobond Yields*

Algeria stopped shipments last April after the Uoited States refused to accept a request that the price of the gas rise sharply, to a level roughly equivalent, in Bru terms, to that of other petroleum

"Io view of remote prospects for project resumption," the Houston-based concern said in a statement. "the company considers its LNG activities to be a discontinued operation." El Paso was the principal importer of liquefied gas from Algeria, whose gas reserves are among the largest in the world.

U.S. resistance to the Algerian demands reflected, among other things, an unwillingness to jeop-ardize contracts with Canada and Mexico under which, until recently, they received less than $4.50 per 1,000 cubic feet for gas for the United States.

Algerin demanded that El Paso's contracts be renegotiated to put the cost of Algerian LNG at al-most $8 per 1,000 cubic feet, including processing and shipping. According to a government official familiar with the negotiations. both sides toughened their positions at last week's session in Algiers and reached an impasse.

U.S. Inflation Likely to Slow in Any Case such an adjustment in the form of a wage freeze has been accepted by the United Auto Workers.

Rudy Penner of the American Enterprise Institute, chief economist for the Olfice of Management and Budget in the Ford administration, is fully in sympathy with what the administration is trying to accomplish, but cautions. They could have a much rockier road out there than they expect."

Mr. Penner expects inflation to be lower, but not by much anytime soon. Achieving substantial reductions io inflation, even if Mr. Reagan's program is passed by Congress, could take years, io his opinion. In particular, Mr. Penner fears that the Fed's tough monetary stance will squeeze real economic activity instead of inflation. "Any realist would say it will be real growth that will give, not toflation," he said. And getting inflation down "could mean unemployment hanging in the 7 percent to 8 percent range for quite a while."

Slack in Labor Even the administration's economic scenario has unemployment still at 7 percent at the end of next year. Such slack in labor markets could belp slow the rise in wages, particularly in some key industries, if the administration avoids put-ting a "floor" under pay by giving in to demands for protection from foreign competition, said Marvin Kosters, another economist with the American Enterprise Institute. Mr. Kosters said that wages in the steel and auto industries have gotten far out of line with average wages in manufacturing, and that workers in those iodustries have lost jobs as a result. "The administration ought to be fostering needed adjustments, not providing protection from foreign competition," he said. In the case of Chrysler,

When you're the 384th foreign bank to open in London you better have something the other 383 don't.

But before we tell you what it is we'd better tell you what the BFCE is.

Banque Française du Commerce Extérieur is a French commercial bank—with a-French name—to which the French Government has assigned substantial mediumand long-term export credit responsibilities and for several decades now we've specialized, as our name suggests, in overseas trade.

But as you can see we haven't exactly knocked ourselves out getting ourselves overseas. While we've always crisscrossed the globe indefatigably for our customers we waited to set up shop abroad until we were ready.

We looked before we leapt. We stayed home doing our bit—a not inconsiderable bit—for the French export trade, in the process building up a solid fund of experience and expertise in international trade and commodity trading—and acquiring a good working relationship with nearly every country in the world.

Although we've been busy setting up representative and trade promotion offices since the early seventies in a number of countries—more than 20 so far—it was only in February, 1977, that we really started exporting the BFCE with the opening in New York of our first overseas branch. (Quickly followed by a loan production office in Houston, an agency in San Francisco and a branch in Milan.)

Last but not least. But the big news, of course, is London—our new City branch just around the comer from the Bank of England on Threadneedle Street.

Now we've finally arrived we'd like to unzip our bags and produce without further ado what marketing men would call our unique selling proposition.

The BFCE is a "small" bank—in the same sense Mont Blanc is a small mountain—operating in one narrow field of specialization. Overseas trade. For you there are three big advantages in this.

It means every single individual customer is very important to us and we'd better make dam sure we're doing a good job.

It means we're experts at being fast and flexible.

And it means we are able to supply you with an exceptional degree of technical and legal know-how along with an exceptional level of competence in the highly specialized area of the international transfer of funds.

We've got the wherewithal. Although we don't have branches all the way from Timbuktu to Kamchatka we are in a position to help with the financing of even the largest projects. (At the end of 1980 the Bank's total assets amounted to £13,700,000,000 with over 90 percent of our business in international trade.)

In fact, at Banque Française du Commerce Extérieur, when it comes to solving your problems, you'll find we've got what it takes.

A Populist Guide to Our Language

By Jini Quinn. Pantheon. 219 pp. $11.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

JIM QUINN, a poet who writes lively food columns for Philadelphia Magazine and The SoHo Weekly News, has been browsing through old language books, among them Otto Jespersen's "A Modern English Grammar on Historical Principles" (1909, 1931; revised edition, 1947), considered the best scholarly grammar of our language"; Thomas R. Lounsbury's "The Standard of Usage in English" (1908), a surprisingly modern discussion of language by "the dean of American grammar in his day"; and the Oxford English Dictionary, that "monumental work of scholarship that defines words according to historical principles — by giv-ing examples of how the words were actually used in the literature of our language."

By undertaking this exercise, Quinn has discovered something interesting. It seems that for hundreds of years some of the best writers in the English language have been writing the kind of sentences that contemporary lan-guage-watchers like Edwin Newman, John Simon, the late Theodore M. Bernstein, and William Safire have earned their daily bread by condemn-

It seems that Shakespeare wrote "All debts are cleared between you and I" ("The Merchant of Venice"). That Oscar Wilde wrote "Experience is the name everyone gives to their mistakes" ("Lady Windermere's Fan"). That Coleridge wrote "Neither the morning nor the evening star are so fair" ("Biographia Literaria"). That Addison, Steele, Defoe, Richardson, Goldsmith, Coleridge, Southey and De Quincey wrote "different than."

That Charles Descript process "Hefer That Charles Darwin wrote "Unfor-tunately, few have observed like you have done" ("Life and Letters"). And that Kipling wrote "Talking of war, there'll be trouble in the Balkans this spring" ("The Light That Failed").

Moreover, in every case, the writer was correct, if we are to believe the rules laid down in the distinguished Oxford English Dictionary. In short, says Quinn, it's all right to use "all the words and phrases and sentences you have been trying to stamp out: Final-ize. Hopefully. Between you and I. You know? Giftable, Winston tastes good — like a cigarette should. There's two of you. Anybody can do what they want. Different than, Dangling participles, Just about every-thing you've heard was illiterate, barbarous, illogical and a threat to the future of English."

These discoveries, and others in a similar vein, enable Quinn to do several things in this outrageous and delightful study. First, he has a wonderfully witty time zapping the language-watchers, or the "pop grammarians," as he calls them, for trying to stop the natural development of language, and for not knowing the true history of the words they are attacking and defending. (For a typical example, to Edwin Newman's complaint about Ron Ziegler's presumed introduction of the words "nonperformance" and operative," Quinn points out gleefully that the former was initiated by Shakespeare in 1609 and the latter main in the hands of the farmers.

LeRoux. They were hardly mul-imillionaires, but they had Red Sox bloodlines and had bustled up an $8 million line of credit.

The Park, Too

When the American League turned down Sullivan-LeRoux's first $15-million offer as underfunded, Mrs. Yawkey came for-ward in the spring of '78 with more financial backing. She even threw in Fenway Park.

On the surface, the sale seemed like story-book stuff: Former journeyman catcher, former dirtytowel collector and widow of owner scrape up millions to carry on Red Sox tradition. No Pollyannaish scenario was ever more totally blasted by reality. Just as the nature of baseball ownership was, of necessity, changing from the rich to the ultrarich, a group that didn't have two spare millions to rub together was buying the Sox.

From Scratch

On the outside, with their buge attendance and enormous national legion of worshippers, the Red Sox seemed like a financial juggernaut. In reality, the wealth of previous Sox seasons was not at the disposal of Sullivan and LeRoux. They basically had to start from scratch at the very moment player salaries rocketed through the roof.

To Sullivan and LeRoux, the symbol of all their problems was agent Jerry Kapstein, the Harvard grad who represented the young intelligent and militant nucleus of the ballclub, including Lynn, Fisk wrong.

As if the war of snubs and public insults between the camps were not enough, the Sox predicament was redoubled by the fact that Yankee owner George Steinbrenner felt no compunction to play hardball as if it were softball. He bought Boston's Lms Tiant and Bob Watson at far above their true market values as much to embarrass and depress the Sox as to im-

Quickly, the new ownership was seen as bumbling and inept. Not only were player-management relations a war zone, but fan-manage-ment affections turned to hostility. The Sox, a moody, cliquish, fundamentally carcless team even in their 99-win glory days of '78, were ripe for the reaper. In '79, they collapsed in September to finish 11½ games behind Baltimore. In 1980, the pitching-poor club was 19 games behind the Yankees.

Rinsing Out the Sox

Normally, such a state of affairs would mean it was time to bring in the fire hose and wash out the chibhouse. Unfortunately, in this case, the four central players seen as malcontents — Burleson, Hobson, Lynn and Fisk --- were, taken as a group, the most hard-nosed, talented and spirited players on a lethargie team.

The Sox decided to keep the monners and back-stabbers, the overpaid free agents who hadn't produced, while getting rid of the nucleus of players who might keep the team a marginal contender for a couple of more years.

For months, New England has been beating its breast about the fates of Freddy and Carlton, those in-tandem Boston emblems of erace (Lynn) and fortitude (Fisk). Both management and players have continued the PR characte that the athletes don't want to leave and management doesn't want to lose them.

A Day's as Good as a Year

The height of the sham came when the Sox "forgot" to mail Lynn and Fisk their regulation contracts before the deadline, missing by one day, Massachusetts has been scoured in a search for the flunky who forgot to put those contracts to the mail on a Friday instead of Monday.

The truth is, the Red Sox did not miss their deadline by a day, but by a year. That is how long their market value when the time came.

The infamous mail foolup that precipitated the bargain-basement trade of Lynn to California and has made Fisk a free agent has not, as Boston fans think, been a Sox problem. Rather, it has solved a

Lynn is gone and Fisk soon will be. No more acute case of bad blood exists in all of baseball than that between the long-suffering, of-ten-injured Fisk and Sullivan, the former catcher - who has implied that Fisk would not play hurt. Behind the pose of negotiation, there is pure hostility on both sides. Mention a possible meeting with Kapstein at his home in San Diego and Sullivan says, "Why should I fly 3,000 miles to talk to him?"

Red Sox broadcaster Ken Harreison, finally fed up, exploded a few days ago and said all those things that the rest of New Eng-land has been muttering for "The chib is io disarray, confused and chaotic," said the Hawk, forgetting his own self-interest, since the club could hardly be blamed for preventing a fellow with such opinions from announcing its games. "If they don't have the money to pay Lynn and Burle-son, they can't afford to own the ballclub.... Fisk is the symbol of Red Sox baseball and the way management is treating time is overound me. They're operating out of weakness and desperation . . . .

The Cycle

The vicious cycle is now complete. The Red Sox, so nich on the surface, yet m reality so strapped, could not afford to keep its stars unless those stars were good enough to win pennants, go to the World Series and haul in all the fiscal perks of a champion. And they weren't that good. So, from management's viewpoint, the decks had to be cleared, the books balanced. As soon as Fisk decides whether to accept the millions of the TV-revenue-rich Toronto Blue Jays or the under-new-ownership Chicago White Sox, the deracination of the Red Sox will be com-

"With two laps to go, I decided I was going to make my move for the tape because Steve in the last few races was expecting me to go the last lap or lap and a half," said Coghlan. "I figured going with two laps would catch him by surprise."

The surprise produced the sixth fastest mile of all time. Only four other milers in history have run faster. The five fastest indoor milers of all time were in the field. "Once he gets ahead at that stage, it's over," said Scott, whose second place time of 3:51.6 was a second faster than Coghlan's old record, also set in San Diego. Coghlan, an also-ran in two Olympics but a sensation on the U.S. indoor circuit, gave credit to Phil Kane, who agreed to serve as a "rabbit." Setting a searing pace, Kane helped put the field in position for a record.

NEW YORK — A man who as verbs must be elemally vigilant-

Io his first press conference at Foggy Bottom, Gen. Alexander Haig Jr. quickly reversed the flow of history by speaking of "the Christian-Judeo values" of West-

But I would stick with "Judeo-Christian" because the phrase re-flects the chronology, going with the flow of Old Testament to New.

The new secretary is becoming a master of the art of the almost correct word. "I have oo finite plan for my own travel," he stated. "Fimeans "with measurable boundaries"; a word he might hetter have used was "specific." Perhaps a current use of "finite" to mean "tangible" influenced General Haig; the possibilities are infinite, hut there is a hig difference between "finite" and "definite."

Vogue words are his specialty. A new vogue word - pioneered by David Stockman, the hudget hawk — is "hemorrhaging." Terrorism. said General Haig, was "bemorrhaging in many respects through-

If "a change in priority" is not a "de-emphasis" of what had been top priority, what is it? Be-cause of too much careful caution, his meaning is hemorrhaging.

Not all Haigravacions call for criticism. When it comes to a trope, Haig is no dope: Asked about Europe, be referred to Po-land as one of a number of 'watchpots." #### Bettelheim on Films, Fairy Tales

By Henry Mitchell
Washington Post Service

ASHINGTON - Bruno Bettelheim, one of the few men ever sprung from a German concentration camp, is famous as a child psychologist in the grand-est sense of the term, and for years he was professor of psychi-atry at the University of Chicago, but he was a little baffled at the request to deliver the first of a yearly showcase series of lectures to the American Film Institute.

He knows oothing of films, af-ter all, and told the institute so. No matter. His declining of the honor to begin the Patricia Wise lectures did him no good. Jean Firstenberg, director of AFI, simply told him he must address the great topic of films, and at the last Bettelheim agreed.

"I got together 500 books bearing on the subject," he said in a pre-lecture chat, "and while I didn't read every word of all of them, at least I held all of them in my hand. My starting pomt, preparing for the lecture is why should anybody go to the mov-ies? What do they do for the "Movies do not invite reflection," he observed. He did not speak of the obvious and primary feature of movies - their flickering quality, and the cardinal emphasis on light and instability. Things are forever moving about.

Ambiguous Reaction

I kept feeling during his lec-ture that Bettelheim was pulling a few punches and not saying straight out that films are either trifling amusements to get you out of the rain for an hour, or else ponderous essays aiming to prove the sun rises in the east, or else propaganda. It would not surprise me that since he's spent months thinking of little else, we may see after a bit some tremendous Bettelheim analysis of what's wrong with films.

I did ask him about his reflections on "Seven Beauties" which appeared in The New Yorker, and in which he took the film up one side and down the other for what he felt was its falsity or cynicism or fraudulence or general wrongheadedness, and Bettelheim said that was another case in which he said no, he would not write about it. But he did.

That film dealt with life in a German coocentration camp. The hero was a pig before he en-tered the camp, a pig after he left, and (Bettelheim argued) his general piggishness, coarseness, sloth, greed, etc., helped him sur-"It's completely false," he said (and wrote in his criticism). "What led to survival was, obviously, the arrival of Allied troops to free the camps, not some ac-con of the people in the camps. But within the camp, before the liberation, your chances of survival were greatly increased if you cooperated with your fellow inmates and shared with them and felt with them. If you behaved as the hero of 'Seven Beauties,' you wouldn't survive to the day of liberation."

Spent Two Years in Camps

Bettelheim was sent to Buchenwald in 1938 and was in camps almost two years. His crime was that he was a Jew and an intellectual.

His degree from the University of Vienna was in aesthetics and psychology. Even years before, e had become interested in helping autistic children, if indeed anything could be done to help. Actistic children lived in his house. The work took years and vast padence. That work in Vienna stopped abruptly with his ar-rest and two years at Dachau and Buchenwald. Bettelheim's release is generally credited to the intervention of New York Gov. Herbert Lehman and Eleanor Roosevelt with German anthorities. They both were familiar with his

It has been said there's nothing like a few years in Dachan to turn you against a film such as Lina Wertmueller's "Seven Beau-u'es." In any case, Benelheim objected strongly to what he thought the film was saying, namely, that humans are bestial whether in Dachau or in liberated Naples. He could not decide whether the film was saying, "Therefore, nothing makes any difference," or whether it was saying, "Life with concentration camps is no worse than life without them," or just what. But ev-erything in him told him the film was a bad one.

One thing great art does, he said in his lecture, is to provide a myth - a shared fantasy of mankind - which tells us our place in nature and how to live well.

Bruno Bettelheim

If movies do not do this - and he cited his own moviegoing as a boy in Vienna as a series of rather shaoby escapes with or without sexual excitement then you might wonder why not. The medium, Bettelheim says, has the same potential for all-emhracing mythmaking as the Athenian theater or the medieval church. But he did not push this quescion beyond stating it.

In his book "The Uses of Enchantment," which deals with the splendid value of fairy tales for children, he repeatedly makes several points that seem to shed light on his view of human development, if not specifically his view of movies.

Fairy tales help a child to know who he is. His fears may oot be able to be put in words, but symbols in the stories can reach him and he understands them perfectly, and he learns his fears are not something to be ashamed of, that others have the same ones. He learns there are ways (when faced with a giant, say) to overcome seemingly fatal threats. He learns from these stories (without any moralizing, for moralizing might threaten him further) that he can and will go from level to level of development and that things will become increasingly better and happier. Provided he does not shirk the

GENERAL POSITIONS AVAILABLE

Unseen, unknown, benevolent powers will come to his aid if he is brave and goes on. But if he stops where he is, refusing to de-velop further, then that is dangerous indeed.

Fairy Tales Endlessly Optimistic By and large, Bettelheim insists, fairy tales are endlessly optimistic. And endlessly true. In the case of adults seeing novies, it could be argued we are no longer little children. I sus-pect, myself, that what Bettel-heim admires so much in the fairy tales is what he would admire in movies, if he could find it. Namely, the trumpet cry to master our fears and crises by developing further as men; to rec-ognize and deal increasingly effectively with our most hostile and dark aspects — not denying them but harnessing them.

Bettelheim is not a Jew in the sense of one who worships at the temple, and has not identified himself with what is sometimes called "Jewish culture." On occasion he has offended some of the Jewish community by saying en-tirely too many Jews perished un-der Hitler because they cared too much for their status and wealth and not enough for their dignity and independence as humans. Religious or not, it is impossi-ble (talking with or reading Bettelheim) not to be reminded of the prophets Micah and Isaiah, and the values of religion. Distrusts 'Artsy' Films

He distrusts he says, con-sciously "artsy" films, accessible "only to chies," and is fond of observing that Sophocles, Shakespeare, etc. (not that it's easy to think of many others of whom this is true) were tremendous box-office favorites as well as heroes to the intellectual establishment. He would like movies to be popular in a mass-consumption way (like his beloved fairy tales?) yet able to stand up under the strictest scrutiny as art and as spiritual explorations (again, like the fairy tales?). "Movies should affirm the meaning of life, the meanings of the lives of quite ordinary men and women. They should affirm

"Celebrate? Is that too strong word?" he was asked. "Celebrate," he said.
